PARADISE FOUND

Boundary Waters

With a flourish of his rod, an angler lands a fish in the pristine reaches of the Boundary Waters Canoe Area. French voyageurs once paddled the hundreds of miles of canoe routes in this northern Minnesota wilderness.

Photograph by Layne Kennedy

We need to maintain some of our treasures the way they were thousands of years ago. That's why we have the Boundary Waters wilderness. Besides, there are so many lazy people out there who could use a little paddling. There's nothing like a good paddle.—Jesse Ventura, governor of Minnesota

Explore the Boundary Waters with polar explorer Will Steger in the October 1999 issue of TRAVELER.
